大学入試共通テストリスニング試験対策 019

■問題1 次の英文を和訳しなさい。

Why don't we pay a little more attention to our breathing? Breathing slowly and deeply helps us take in more oxygen. According to our study, doing slow breathing exercise, even for a short time, increases oxygen consumption by 37%. Some researchers suggest that slow breathing activates parts of the brain that reduce anxiety. Slow breathing could also be a simple solution when people have trouble sleeping. With slow, controlled breathing before going to bed, people wake up fewer times during the night. Several further studies have shown that a nose-breathing technique from yoga can have a lasting effect on reducing one's blood pressure. We should realize the potential benefits in our unconscious behavior.

■問題2 英文を読んで、後の問いに答えなさい。

- (1) People have gone on to open routes in the sky as well. Since the invention of the airplane, these routes have made it possible for people to travel long distances easily. Eventually, people became able to travel safely and comfortably high in the sky, and going vast distances only took a small amount of time. In fact, people used to need more than one month to travel to Europe from Japan by ship, whereas today they can travel between them in a single day by airplane. Owing to the establishment of these sky routes, a great number of people now travel around the world for sightseeing, visiting friends, and doing businesses.
- (2) Today, we have a new type of route, the Internet, which specializes in the electronic exchange of information. By using this worldwide route, people can easily obtain information that once was available mainly from books and face-to-face communication. They can also instantly send messages to large numbers of people all at once. According to one study, more than 3.5 billion people, which is about half of the global population, have access to this electronic route today. As technology advances, more and more people will take advantage of this route to gather information and communicate.
- (3) As long as there have been people, there have been routes to connect them.
